Spain is believed to be about ready to holloa "Nough."

Sampson may again bombard San Juan. If so, let us hope he will make a better job of it.

It will be remembered that Dewey went inside the bottle and bottled his Spanish fleet from the inside.

The Populists, Silver Republicans and Liberty parties of Ohio have formed a fusion and may select a new party name.

The first army of 125,000 is now nearly complete and the invasion of Cuba is still in the future. If Corporal Garity has reported for duty, why not let the battle proceed?

Major M. H. Crump, one of the most soldierly men in Kentucky, has been given a Major's commission by Governor Bradley and may be assigned to the Third battalion.

Sampson is said to be back-tracking along the north coast of Cuba, going in an opposite direction from San Juan, which was supposed to be his destination.

Germany and France are both growing more unfriendly to the United States and do not like the position of Hawaii. They have called upon that government to explain why it is not neutral.

A second expedition of 25,000 men left San Francisco last night on the Ohio, Zealandia and Centennial. Transports are hard to secure and the work of getting troops to Manila will be very slow.

Maj. A. T. Wood, who at one time thought he had a chance to get into the Senate on Gov. Bradley's appointment, is now being "mentioned" as the Governor's choice for one of the Brigadier Generalships.

The small American bark, Sarance, captured at Iloilo, in the Philippines, shortly after the war began, has been captured by Admiral Dewey. The Sarance was the property of Wm. Simpson, Jr., of New York.

The cables at Cienfuegos cut some time ago are again in operation. It is now believed that the cables destroyed were only dummies. These wires connect with Santiago, where Cervera is supposed to be.

At last there is a chance for Gov. Bradley to do something for the colored man. He announces that if he can secure the permission of the war department, he will have a negro regiment organized with all of the officers negroes.

Weyler's brother-in-law was exchanged for a newspaper correspondent, but if it had been Weyler himself, the Government would have demanded a couple of managing editors. We need our editors, but we want Weyler bad.

The harbor where Cervera is supposed to be, is a very difficult one to enter and his fleet is comparatively safe inside. Only one ship can enter at a time by the narrow channel 225 feet wide between two high promontories that conceal the inside of the bay, and a range of hills makes it difficult to approach the city from the rear. Cervera may stay bottled up until peace is declared.

An army of 75,000 men is to march on Havana, and at the same time Rear Admiral Sampson will begin the task of destroying the formidable defenses which Blanco has thrown up along the sea. The movement was decided upon at a White House conference between the President, the Naval and War Secretaries, the head of the army and the Naval Board of Strategy. There will be no preliminary landing for the establishment of a base of supplies. Instead every available man in the army will be set upon Cuban soil at practically the same time. Havana is to be taken by storm, while from the sea the guns from dozens of ships will make a fire so hot for Blanco that capitulation seems certain.

Santiago harbor is only eight miles long and four miles wide, and still the question of whether or not the Spanish fleet is in it has not been officially decided after nearly a week of conflicting reports. Why not smoke the hollow and find out what is in it?

"Morro" means promontory, and since nearly all the Cuban castles are on promontories, they are called Morro Castles. Morro Castle at Santiago de Cuba is likely to be the first to crumble before American guns.

POST-DISPATCH SNAP SHOTS.

Paris is at last unfashionable in the United States.

The battleship Kentucky might do great work at the Santiago bottle.

Would Spain like to sit down on our "Remember the Maine" hard-tack.

Censor General Greely will blue pencil any light writing about his elaborate whiskers.

Massachusetts would perhaps prefer to have our hardtack stamped "Remember Long."

In the name of all femininity let no more rats from Chicago be landed at Union Station.

Apprehension of danger along the coast may have tended to unnerve the Boston Club in Tuesday's game.

The fire in the rear of the Spaniards at Santiago should be something more than an insurgent camp fire.

When all day long, neither Long nor Day have any news, the public ought perhaps to be content to wait.

Citizens who have been lamed in the wheat pit are in as much need of Mrs. Leiter's ambulance as is Uncle Sam.

In considering alliances it may be well not to forget that people speaking the same tongue have the best facilities for quarrelling.

Gen. Wade is not disposed to "wade in." He prefers that our troops should be kept in hot and dangerous Southern camps until autumn.

"Don't forget to boil the water" is kept standing in Chicago papers. Whenever there is any neglect of this warning there is an increase in the official mortality list.

Mr. Dingley will have to protect against the boycott of the French importations. We need the revenue on woman's hat as well as that which got on Mr. Dingley's London hat.

Patrolman Hell is still a member of the St. Louis Police Department. James Heaven, once a member, is out of it. Has this fact anything to do with the present mixed-up state of affairs?

The lady bicyler who has armed herself with a revolver to make trouble for careless drivers may be a good markswoman. Let all drivers beware. We want no tragedies on the highway.

Story of the Marechal Neil Rose.

The lovely Marechal Neil Rose owes its name to the Empress Eugenie. When General Neil returned from the scene of his triumphs over the Austrians in Italy after the battles of Solferino and Magenta, a poor man gave him a basket filled with exquisite yellow roses. The general had a cutting struck from one of the blooms, and when the rose tree from it had grown, he took it to the Empress Eugenie. She was charmed with the gift, but when she asked the name of the rose, she was told that it was unknown. "Ah!" she said, "I will give it a name; it shall be the Marechal Neil." By this she conveyed to the gallant officer that he had been made a marshal of France for his services to the country, as well as naming the lovely blossom.

The grand jury at Cadiz returned 35 indictments for 17 different offenses, including pretty much everything except murder.

The Army Chaplain's Sign.

Army Chaplains occupied peculiar positions. While officers, in a way, they were not hedged about with that divinity that doth hedge a man wearing shoulder straps. In consequence, the men in the ranks often bothered chaplains a great deal by asking them questions which they dare not ask the commissioned officers.

While Thomas was hiding behind the trenches at Corinth his men became very anxious to know when the division would move out and take the initiative. They did not dare question their officers, but they did ply their chaplains with questions. The chaplain of an Illinois regiment had been annoyed by repeated question as to when the regiment would move, and finally decided upon a plan to head off questioners. Securing the top of a hard tack box he printed the following sign and hung it up in front of the tent:

The Chaplain Does Not Know When the Regiment will Move.

He thought this would save him further annoyance, and retired at night with the determination of having a good night's sleep. The next morning he stepped from his tent and was astonished to find his sign had been altered. It read as follows:

The Chaplain Does Not Know When the Regiment Will Move, Neither Does He Care a Damn.

The sign came down with a rush and the chaplain resigned himself to answering all questions touching the probable moving of the regiment.
